

Quotes about falling in love

“I looked at this guy with this beautiful beard and I thought, I'm going to marry that man. It was the WEIRDEST thing! It was like every bone in my body directed me toward him. Time literally SLOWED DOWN! I walked over to him and said, 'Can I touch your beard?'”

"The first time I saw him, we were sitting at the gate for our flight to Chicago. I remember glancing over at him and thinking, Oh, wow , he's cute . When I got to my seat, I saw that the seat beside me was empty and thought, How awesome would it be if he ended up next to me?"

“When I left for college, she was still in high school. I was so miserable without her, despite all that college life had to offer. Looking back, I realize the moment I knew she'd be my wife was when she sent me a box of cookies and a love note, which came in the mail when I was alone, and although there were plenty of other things to eat, I was starving for home. I realized “home” meant her. 25 years later, it still does.”

“I'm a flight attendant. I was working a flight from Atlanta from Milwaukee and he was on the plane, and we started conversing. I guess he kind of noticed me. We exchanged numbers and through phone calls and Facebook and texting, we got to know each other more. I had another layover in Milwaukee and that's when we finally started dating. And the rest is history.”

“We met on a dating site twelve years ago. I sent her a message saying: 'I want to let you know up front that I'm in a wheelchair, because I can't hide it.' And she wrote back: ' Why ? Is it bright yellow?'”

“The first time I kissed my husband-to-be was at a ball, after a tango. We had been friends for about a year, and the idea of being more had never crossed my mind... .He leads me in a tango. When it's finished, we pause, look into each other's eyes, everything changes and we kiss on the ballroom floor...but less than two years later, we're as married as the law allows.”

“I never imagined that serving coffee was how I'd find true love. We were both working at different Starbucks when I first met him. I was grabbing coffee with friends at his store and introduced myself. Sparks were definitely flying but the relationship didn't unfold until a couple months later when I was transferred to work at his Starbucks location. Coffee is the way to many people's hearts, and I definitely took a double shot.’

"The minute I knew I loved her was when we were in a study group with other classmates. Everyone was looking around and then someone looked at us and said, 'Wait, are you two together?' Without hesitation, she blurted out, 'Yes, we are.' I just smiled, but was happy inside. When we left, I was like, 'Umm, you think you could have told me we were together or asked me?' and she responded, 'Are you dating anyone else?’